

Eugene Y. Tsai, MD, is a board certified orthopaedic surgeon with subspecialty certificate of added qualification in hand and upper extremity surgery. He is an assistant professor of orthopaedic surgery. He is currently the program director for the orthopaedic surgery residency at Cedars Sinai. His interests include trauma of the upper extremity and minimally invasive surgical techniques including endoscopic carpal tunnel surgery and arthroscopy of the hand, wrist, and elbow.

Dr. Tsai received his medical degree from Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York City. He is a native of Southern California, attending Harvard-Westlake for high school before going to Northwestern University for college where he studied economics and religion.

He completed his orthopaedic surgery residency at Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland and his hand and upper extremity surgery fellowship at the Tufts/New England Baptist Hospital Combined Fellowship in Boston.

Honors Dr. Tsai has received include being inducted into the Alpha Omega Alpha Honor Medical Society, receiving the Carter Makley Award for clinical excellence, resident teaching, mentorship, and leadership, being elected to the American Orthopaedic Association's Resident Leadership Forum as well as being elected to their Emerging Leaders Program. He has also been awarded the Golden Apple Award for Excellence in Teaching at Cedars Sinai. He has received patient satisfaction awards from Cedars-Sinai Medical Group as well as a Best Curbside Consultant Award. He has worked as the Tier 1 leader of Hand and Reconstructive Surgery and served on the Board of Directors of Cedars Sinai Medical Group.