

Dr. Kyle Sweeney completed a musculoskeletal fellowship at the University of Chicago after completing his residency at Emory University. He earned his medical degree from Vanderbilt University School of Medicine, and prior to that he graduated with honors from Michigan State University where he was a 3-year letterman in Track & Field. In addition to a busy clinical practice, he is the current residency program director at The University of Kansas Medical Center in Kansas City, KS.