

Tzu-Shang Liu, MD, PhD, FAOA

I was inspired at a young age to follow my father's footsteps as an orthopaedic surgeon. Growing up outside of Philadelphia, I went to University of Pennsylvania and stayed there for the combined-degree program. I matched at University of Pittsburgh, and while under the tutelage of Freddie Fu, I was driven to sports medicine and stayed there for the fellowship to work with Chris Harner and Jim Bradley. After completing the fellowship, I started my own practice in California and am still there to this day. Even in a solo-surgeon practice, I stayed active in AOSSM, contributed to the AOA Emerging Leaders Program, and started volunteering for ABOS.
