Dr. Abhiram R. Bhashyam, MD PhD, is a hand and upper extremity surgeon at Massachusetts General Hospital and the associate program director for the Harvard Combined Orthopaedic Surgery Residency Program. He has an active interest in in silico simulation using mathematical modeling and artificial intelligence techniques for implant design and outcome prediction. He is passionate about education of undergraduate students, medical students, residents and fellows from both a practical and research perspective.