

Bio:

Catherine (Katie) Fedorka MD attended Colgate University for her undergraduate degree before matriculating to Jefferson Medical College at Thomas Jefferson University in Philadelphia for her medical degree. She completed her orthopedic surgery residency at Hahnemann University Hospital/Drexel University College of Medicine followed by her shoulder and elbow fellowship at the Boston Shoulder Institute/Harvard Combined Orthopedic Program. She has since been at Cooper University Hospital for the last 9 years. She is an associate professor at Cooper Medical School at Rowan University, associate program director of the orthopedic surgery residency, and Director of Quality for Cooper Bone and Joint Institute. She is an avid researcher with special interests in decreasing opioid use in shoulder surgery, proximal humerus fractures, traumatic rotator cuff tears, and social determinants of health. Outside of work, she enjoys spending time with her two young daughters (Gwenyth and Peyton), running, skiing, being outside, and spending time with friends and family.
