

Thomas Myers, MD, MPT is an associate professor of orthopaedic surgery at the University of Rochester Medical Center. Tom grew up in Pittsburgh, PA and obtained a Master of Physical Therapy from Duquesne University in 1999. After graduating medical school from Temple University, he completed a research year in adult reconstruction at the University of Virginia. He then went on to orthopaedic residency at the University of Pittsburgh Medical Center followed by a fellowship in adult reconstruction at the Cleveland Clinic. After 4 years of private practice in Indiana Tom joined the faculty at the University of Rochester Medical Center in 2016. He is active in the AAOS, AAHKS, and the Academic Orthopaedic Consortium. He and his wife Neysa have 4 daughters, 1 son, and a dog.