

I am a board certified pediatric orthopedic surgeon at Gillette Children's Hospital, and an assistant professor of orthopedic surgery at the University of Minnesota. Originally from Idaho Falls, Idaho, I completed my undergraduate degree at the University of Nebraska, then completed my medical degree, orthopedic surgery residency, and pediatric orthopedic surgery fellowship at the University of Utah. I have been in full-time practice at Gillette Children's Hospital in Saint Paul, MN since completing my training in 2011.

Clinically, my practice covers the breadth of pediatric orthopedics, with specialization in clubfeet and pediatric foot deformities, spina bifida and neuromuscular conditions, and in pediatric trauma. I am the director of the Gillette clubfoot program. I strive to provide a comprehensive, compassionate, and collaborative patient care experience for all my patients and their families, and direct patient care is what truly brings me joy in my career. I serve as our institution's fellowship director, and have served as interim site director and assistant site director for the pediatric orthopedic rotations for rotating residents.

Outside of work, I enjoy trail-running, surfing, travel, Husker football, and spending time with my husband and our two dogs. My husband is a French native, and we enjoy spending time with his family and friends in the south of France whenever possible.
