

Chandra Vemulapalli is a current Orthopaedic Trauma Surgeon at University Medical Center New Orleans and faculty at Tulane University School of Medicine. He attended Wake Forest University for his undergraduate education and the University of Texas at Houston for medical school. Dr. Vemulapalli completed his orthopaedic residency training at the University of Texas at Houston McGovern Medical School. He then completed his fellowship in orthopaedic trauma at UT Houston/Memorial Hermann Hospital in the Texas Medical Center. His clinical interests include fractures of the pelvis and acetabulum and complex upper extremity injuries. He is the chief of orthopaedic trauma at University Medical Center New Orleans and the Associate Program Director for the Tulane Orthopaedics residency.