William Scott Kimmerly, MD, is a board-certified orthopaedic surgeon specializing in sports medicine with Peachtree Orthopedics in Atlanta, Georgia. He serves as President and Managing Partner of the practice, where he combines an active clinical practice with a longstanding commitment to physician leadership and healthcare strategy.

Throughout his career, Dr. Kimmerly has served in numerous leadership roles, including President of the Atlanta Orthopaedic Society and member of Piedmont Healthcare's Clinical Governance Council. He has helped guide practice growth, ambulatory surgery development, physician governance, and strategic partnerships while remaining dedicated to the care of athletes and active patients.

Dr. Kimmerly earned his medical degree from the University of Tennessee College of Medicine, completed residency at Emory University, fellowship in sports medicine at the Steadman-Hawkins clinic in Vail, CO and has spent more than 20 years advancing orthopaedic care in the Atlanta community. He is honored to join the American Orthopaedic Association.