Dr. Arturo Corces has spent nearly forty years in Orthopaedic surgery, most of it in South Florida. He graduated from the Bronx High School of Science in 1976. After Medical School at New York University he trained at SUNY for his residency and chief residency, then went on to a fellowship in adult reconstruction at the University of Pennsylvania in 1988.He has held faculty appointments at the University of Miami, Barry University, and the University of South Alabama and currently teaches as an Affiliated Clinical Assistant Professor at NSU's Dr. Kiran C. Patel College of Medicine. He has been the Program Director of the Orthopedic Surgery Residency at Larkin Community Hospital since 2019, and he directs the Implant Service at the Miami Institute for Joint Reconstruction, where he's practiced for over two decades. He sits on the AAOS Adult Reconstruction Hip Program Committee and is a reviewer and editor for several peer reviewed journals.

Over the course of his career, Dr. Corces has published extensively on hip and knee arthroplasty, revision surgery, and periprosthetic infection, and has lectured at conferences throughout the Americas, Asia and Europe. What he enjoys talking about most are the residents and fellows he's trained along the way. A lot of his energy goes into mentoring the next generation of orthopedic surgeons, through Larkin's residency program and the Miami Orthopedic Research Foundation a not for profit organization .